Residents can celebrate the grand opening of the newly renovated Tugman Park playground on Saturday, the first project completed since voters approved a $39.5 million parks and recreation bond measure more than a year ago.

The new playground will get its party as planning or construction of several other bonds-funded projects are being planned or will be underway soon.

The playground already is in use as workers took down the construction fence about a week ago, said Kate Davidson, chairperson of Southeast Neighbors.

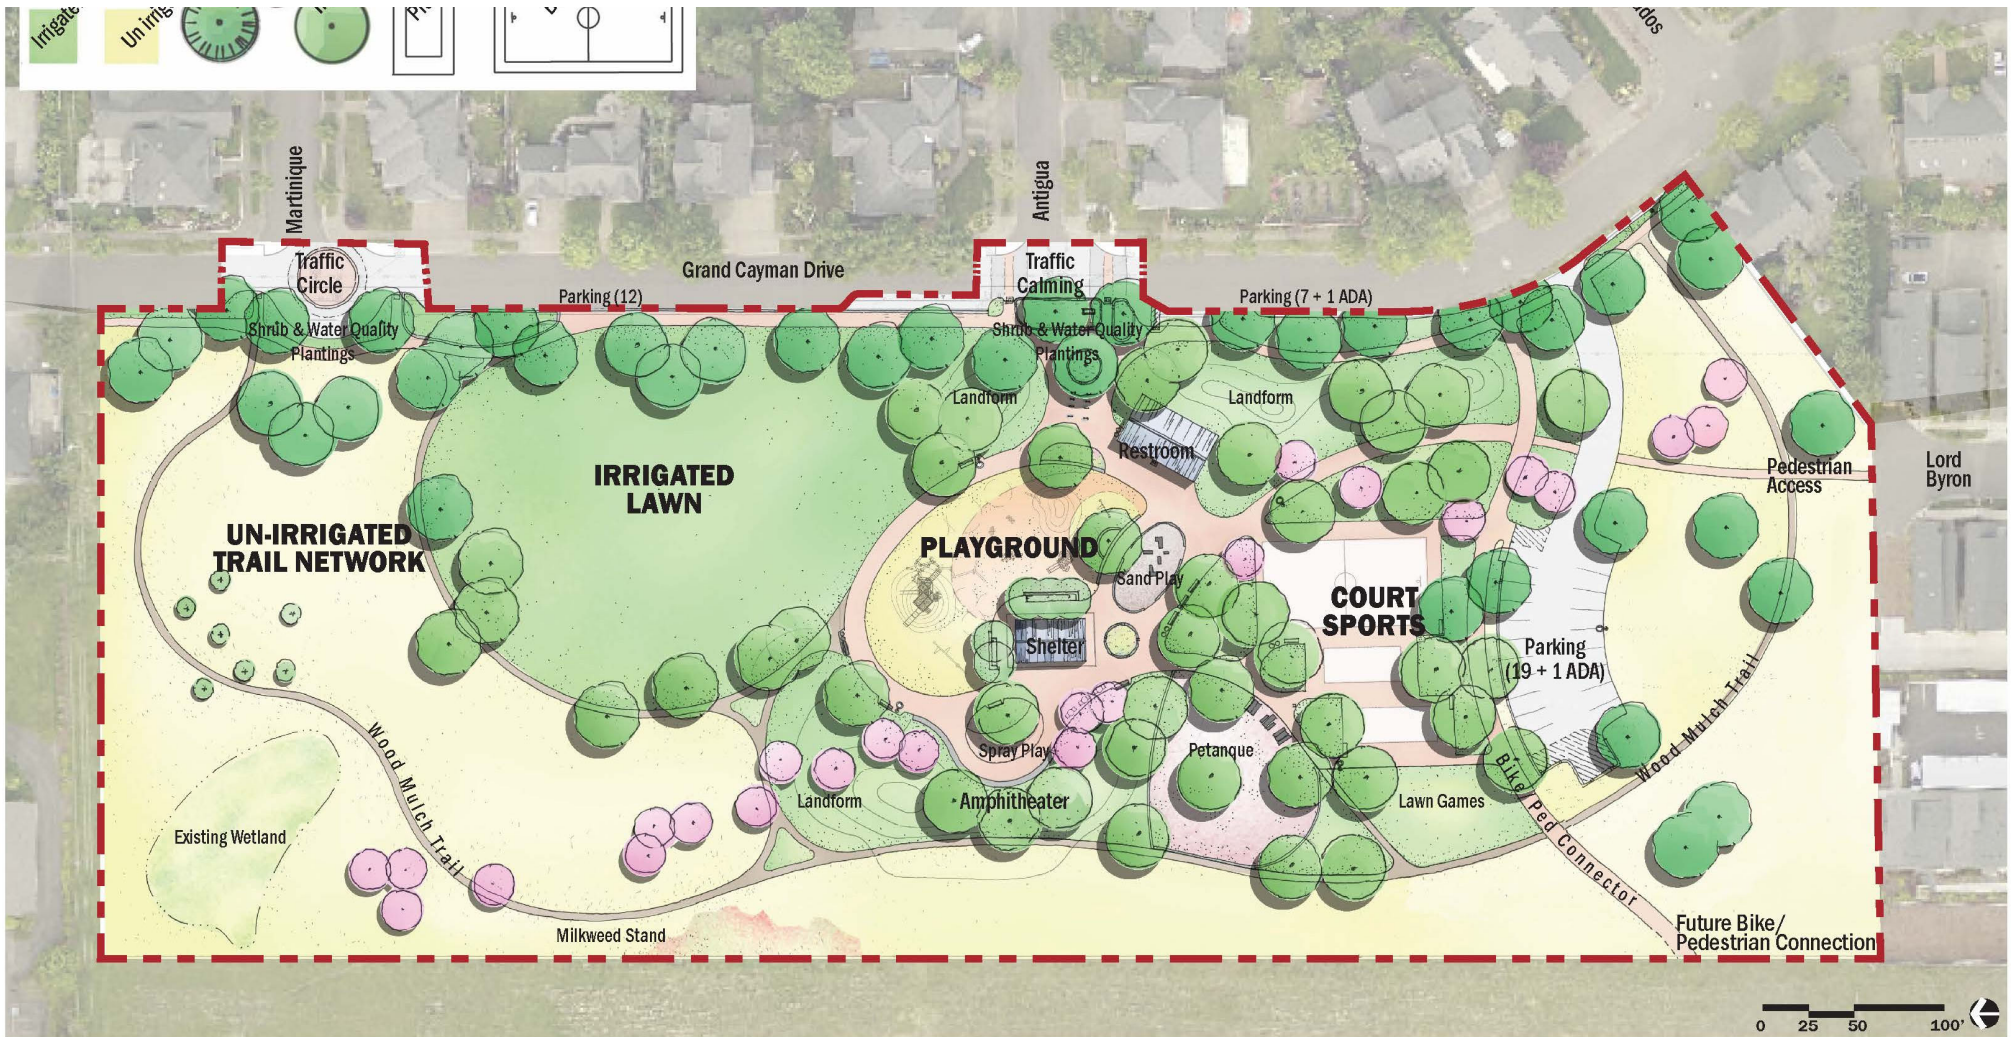

Davidson said it's nice to see residents' tax dollars at work not long after voters approved the construction bond and an accompanying operating levy in May 2018.

The new playground features new play structures, sand play area, track rides
